DIRTY CAMPAIGN

Casual spectators are shaking their heads and chuckling consternation over the prospect for an unusually bitter political campaign. National Chairman Farley has predicted the campaign will be dirty as well as hot.

One thing is evident. The campaign will be just as dirty and just as hot as the politicians want to make it. That is particularly true of the dirt. Malicious lies and slander don't originate with the public, but with politicians.

Former President Hoover, who has asked Secretary of Interior Ickes to apologize for a recent statement inferring that congress passed unconstitutional legislation during the Hoover administration, has supplied Democratic leaders with an opportunity to put the campaign on a fair basis.

If Mr. Ickes has wronged Mr. Hoover, he should be willing to apologize. Any other course of conduct would advertise an attitude which makes unfairness acceptable in the campaign. The issue is too real to be prostituted by mud slingers.

It is not forgotten that the Democratic party employed openly in the last presidential contest a campaign to "Smear Hoover." Certainly, the present officials of the party have reason to fear the consequences of a "Smear Roosevelt" campaign. National Chairman Farley, if he wants to get on the right side of the fence, could do nothing more effective to stop whatever effect such a campaign might have than to keep his own party's campaign above reproach. A logical first step would be to get Secretary Ickes straightened out on his recent charge that former President Hoover was not a strict defender of the Constitution from March, 1928, to March, 1932.

EXPANSION

Rumors of the termination of the Italo-Ethiopian war are circulating again. Premier Mussolini is said to be ready to listen to terms which are considerate of Italy's need for raw materials and an outlet for its surplus population.

There is a possibility, which amounts almost to a probability, that Il Duce will be able to get recognition for his plea that Italy must have room in which to expand. If so, the world might expect to see certain things happen.

It might expect to see hundreds of thousands of Italians going to Ethiopia to take up residence there. It might expect to see Italy obtaining large quantities of raw materials from Ethiopia. It might expect to see the emphasis removed from the desirability of Italian parents having large families. Most important of all it might expect to see Italy become a peaceful nation.

The facts, however, don't support these expectations. Italians don't like to live in Africa any more than Japanese like to live in Formosa, which they obtained to accommodate their surplus population. Ethiopia, as far as is known, is neither capable of furnishing raw materials nor of absorbing finished products. Premier Mussolini, if worried about too much population, shouldn't be worrying so much about increasing it. Last, there is no reason to believe Italy would be more peaceful if it obtained concessions in Ethiopia.

Expansion is and always has been a favorite excuse for waging war. At the same time, it always has been a poor excuse and it still is. Premier Mussolini, if he wanted to put the cards on the table, has other reasons for invading Ethiopia, reasons which are better overlooked when he is speaking for publication.

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—An hilarious, descriptive letter from Roy Howard Christmas in far away Bali and heading, as he puts it, for "two weeks of one-night stands in northern India." And a mournful talk with Lee O'Connell about the passing of our friend, George Buckley.

So motoring with my lady through the serenities of Sleepy Hollow, aglow with frost, and musing over the many Shakespearean references to sleep and how sleep intrigued him. Then to Mrs. Averell Harriman's tea for Peter Arno. And on to the Lawrence Tibbets.

After dinner to the Charles Driscolls' annual pour of Swedish punch and Dr. George Rockwell in more loquacious quack than ever. Home and pleasant notes from New Jersey's Governor Hoffman and Vincent Youmans. And reading "The Strange Life and the Strange Loves of Edgar Allan Poe." How morbid!

A popular Sunday diversion these nippy days has been the "Hunt Breakfast" with red-coated waiters and orchestras playing hunting tunes to sustain the illusion of tawdry. Among regulars it's called the hang-over snack. For a buck a gratuitous cocktail and serve-yourself selections of chicken hash, fish cakes, scrambled eggs and coffee. Most of the hunters are theatrical folk but there are enough Broadway sharpshooters to carry out the Nimrod notion.

Frank Buck is one of the town's most finicky eaters. The slap-bang grub of the deep jungle camps whet him for civilization's dainties when he returns from his safari. He haunts the restaurants featuring highly tariffed menus, and Egyptian squab, at $3 per order, is frequently a breakfast dish. The Martin Johnsons also indulge the same gastronomic luxuries when they round in from the tinned routine of far places.

Personal nomination for the slickest impromptu offside remarks over the air—those of Fred Allen.

Duncan McMartin, who has a whopping income from Canadian mining properties, is hallelujahed as the heaviest spender among the night clubs, even restoring the century note tip to headwaiters. He may engage an entire mosque for the evening. When at his mines he has upon lonely occasions phoned favorite singers to render over the wire, to full orchestral accompaniment, some of the ballads he enjoys. That runs into important money.

Thyra Samter Winslow, who retains so deftly the flavor of the small town in her magazine stories and books, carries out the same idea entertaining at her Kew Gardens home. Her "Saturday nights" are a hark back to those parlor similitudes along the residential street of a wee village. Charades, anagrams, clap-in-clap-out and now and then an apple bobbin'. It sounds rather naive and dull but once a crowd of city folk get into the spirit of such country-jake di- does they whoop and holler like a gang of Indians off reservation for the night.

I have thought the nadir of neat description of village loneliness was expressed by Miss Winslow in a newspaper essay some years ago. She was telling of a spinster who lived alone in a bleak shuttered Arkansas cottage where a street tapered off into a tangle of wildwood. She observed: "A pin drop would have been an event in her life."

Bagatelles: George S. Kaufman and Evelyn Nesbit were in the same class in a Pittsburgh public school . . . Gelett Burgess who always has four o's in his book titles has got as far as "Good Looking" for his latest, and is stumped . . . Bruce Barton sleeps soundest on trains . . . Alma Clayburgh is one of the few who can entice Theodore Dreiser to a dinner party . . . Fritz Scheff is a movie-a-day fan.

There are few places where a layman feels so in the way as in the kitchen of a high-class cafe. I was shown one the other evening. As we moved through the pink-tiled, copper and aluminum glitter, lids were lifted on this and that. The only thing I recognized was a pot of spare ribs. "Spare ribs are nice," I simpered—my sole comment. And returning to our table, someone inquired where we had been so long. The lady with me observed: "He's been out in the kitchen nicing the spare ribs!"

The hodge podge block on West 67th street, between Central Park West and Columbus avenue probably houses more writers and artists than any similar stretch in even the Paris Latin Quarter. Both sides of the street are lined with imposing studio buildings. Howard Chandler Christy, F. R. Gruger, W. T. Benda, Bob Brinkerhoff, Leon Gordon, Walter Biggs, to name a few. On one side of the street, squeezed in between the buildings, is a frame two-story shack housing an ancient blacksmith shop, still operating so the zing of the anvil is heard daily. On the opposite side is an aromatic lumber yard with a jerry-built office. Flower boxes and a trellis are against it and in the summer geraniums and morning glories bloom. The hotel des Artistes also occupies a corner site.

Thingumbobs: Carol McComas is married to a Shanghai doctor and living there . . . Marlene Dietrich is a cloudy day fan . . . Sam Morton, Four Mortons, can do a buck and wing at 73 . . . The Will Rogers daughter Mary is considering a London dramatic offer . . . Rob Wagner and Eddie Guest were once shipmates on a Detroit newspaper . . . John Barrymore is still an silk pajama buyer in America . . . Noel Coward holds English championship . . . O. Henry used "ain't" when he felt like it in his stories.

THE STARS SAY

For Tuesday, January 14.

There are excellent auguries for those in employment of this day, judging by an important aspect between the sun and the moon. This promises honors, preferment, increase and popularity with superiors and those in places of power and prestige. It would be well to seek such promotion and advantage but be cautious with papers and writings of every nature.

If This Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of promotion, with employers, superiors and those in power prepared to lend kindly ear to requests for increase, favors or other approaches for preferment. In all papers and writings be cautious. A child born on this day may be capable, intellectual, and may find high favor with its employers and co-workers.

FROM THE NEWS FILES

National Spotlight Turns on Supreme Court

New supreme court building

Recent decision of the United States supreme court declaring the AAA unconstitutional and the importance of their future decisions on other pending New Deal legislation has focussed the eyes of the nation on the supreme tribunal. Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes is the austere presiding power of the court. Justices Louis Brandeis, Benjamin Cardozo and Harlan Stone are regarded as liberals. Justices James McReynolds, George Sutherland, Willis Van Devanter and Pierce Butler are looked upon as conservatives. Justice Owen Roberts has at various times sided with both groups, most recently turning conservative to vote against the AAA.

Friday evening with a service at the Presbyterian church, a week of special services began at the Methodist Episcopal church Sunday evening. The guest minister at these services is Rev. J. E. Henderson of Minerva. A special program of music has been outlined for each night of meetings, which have been arranged by the Rev. B. J. Black, pastor of this church.

Word has been received here that Charles Marton, former county service officer here, now located at Cleveland, is now able to leave his bed in the U. S. Marine hospital at Cleveland. Mr. Marton suffered a severe injury to his back recently after attending a Legion meeting at Napoleon, O., falling down a flight of stairs in a hotel where no light was exposed in the passageway. At the present he is compelled to wear a plaster cast.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION ON REQUEST.

Simultaneously with the enactment of the Gold Reserve Act on Jan. 30, 1934, giving the President authority by the Gold Reserve Act to further advance the gold price up to $1.34 per ounce. That such power will ever be utilized is obviously difficult to forecast, due to numerous political and economic considerations involved.

Without an increase of the present gold price the only probable source of increased earnings for the gold mining companies is to continue increasing production. United States gold production in 1935 showed a gain of about 25 percent over the preceding year, which in turn was up substantially from 1933. Canada also showed an important increase.

Most of the dividend paying stocks shown above return a liberal yield. In most cases latest estimated earnings for 1935 show ample dividend coverage. Stocks in this group may be held for income and possible developments in the price of gold.

What is the World's most Vitalizing beverage?

Facts you should know about the effects of what you drink—

What is the world's most vitalizing beverage?

Of all the stimulants, tea is considered by physicians and scientists to be the most completely satisfactory vitalizing beverage. Athletic trainers concur in this opinion, and tea is universally served at football, track, and other athletic training tables. Explorers and big-game hunters carry tea with them in preference to any other beverage, knowing that tea will give them the vitality to carry on. It has been called, "The safe pick-me-up," "The best of cocktails," "The world's most vitalizing beverage."

What other beneficial effects come from Tea?

Tea not only brings vitality, but also mental alertness. Tests have proved that tea speeds up mental processes; makes brain-work easier, problems simpler, and mental reactions quicker. It helps you to concentrate—actually helps you to think. Science has also proved that tea has a beneficial alkaline effect on the system, that it helps digestion, and that it contains valuable salts necessary to health.

How should Tea be prepared?

To get real vitality from tea, it is important to prepare it properly. Here's how it's regularly made for athletic training tables. Use a teaspoonful of tea for each cup and add an extra one "for the pot." Pour freshly boiling water over the tea and let it brew for not less than five minutes. If you prefer weaker tea, add hot water. Don't brew the tea for a shorter period. Never boil the tea itself and never use water that is not boiling. Use milk or lemon as you choose and sugar to suit your own taste.

What happens when you drink a cup of Tea?

When you drink a cup of good tea, properly made, your vitality goes up amazingly and almost immediately. Your tired feeling seems to melt away. You feel rested, cheerful, and ready either for work or for a good time. And unlike many other stimulants the effect of tea is lasting and is not followed by a depressing let-down. These facts, which you can easily confirm yourself, are based on conclusive scientific evidence. The chart at the right indicates your vitality curve.

Is Tea expensive?

Tea is the least expensive of all beverages. So many cups are made from a single pound that the cost per cup is ridiculously low. In the early days of the tea trade tea sold for as high as fifty dollars a pound. Yet so many were its benefits that people actually paid that price. Later, the famous Yankee clipper ships were built solely to carry tea. It became the true American drink. As more tea became available, the price continued to drop. Today there is no family in America who need go without tea's benefits.

What is the best time to drink Tea?

Any time at all is a time for tea. With meals—between meals. Before going to bed at night—on getting up in the morning. When you have a hard job ahead of you—and when you are tired from a long active day. Whenever and wherever you need a safe pick-me-up. And you can drink as many cups of tea as you choose, without worrying. For scientists agree that tea is one stimulant that's really safe... that has no depressing after-effects, no unpleasant let-down.

Where does good Tea come from?

Where teas are grown is important to you because you naturally want all the benefits that tea can bring you. You want flavor—you want fragrance. And above all you want mental and physical vitality. Vitalizing tea comes from INDIA, CEYLON, and JAVA-SUMATRA.

What effect does Tea have on sleeping at night?

It is an amazing physiological fact that, despite its vitalizing effect, tea actually helps you to get a good night's sleep. This makes tea an ideal beverage for the evening meal, particularly after a hard day. And fortunately you can drink as many cups of tea as you please during the day and evening, enjoy its vitalizing effect as often as you care to, and enjoy untroubled sleep throughout the night.

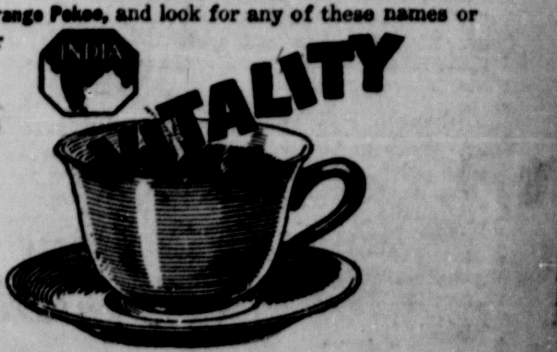

Who drinks Tea?

Because of the vitality tea gives, it is particularly the beverage of active, mentally and physically vigorous men and women... people who do things and get things done. Throughout the world, in every country and every town, cheering, fragrant tea is helping to raise people's spirits and is adding to their happiness and their efficiency. In fact it has become, by a wide margin, the most popular beverage in the world. More tea is enjoyed by more people than any other beverage.

Buy a good brand of Orange Pekoe, and look for any of these names or in advertising.

Democrats Break, Bundesen Backed In Governor Race

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Dr. Herman Nils Bundesen, known as one of the biggest vote getters in Chicago, today had the backing of the state Democratic organization for the gubernatorial race.

The state organization openly broke with Governor Henry Horner, who had previously announced he would seek renomination.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago, and National Committeeman Patrick J. Nash dominated the Chicago group in the support of Dr. Bundesen and won over the down-state factions last night by a reported agreement to name others than Chicagoans for the two seats of congressmen-at-large.

Incumbents again named included J. Hamilton Lewis, United States senator, and Otto Kerner, attorney general, both of Chicago.

Informed of the endorsement of Dr. Bundesen, Governor Horner reiterated he would seek the independent Democratic nomination.

"The actions of the state-making group were nothing more than a pantomime," said Governor Horner. "They were there merely to pick the man Mayor Kelly wished."

No candidates for congressman-at-large were named, which political observers interpreted as indicating Martin J. Brennan, incumbent, would not be renominated. Illinois' other congressman-at-large, Michael L. Igoe, resigned to become a United States district attorney.

John Stelle, retiring state treasurer, was chosen for lieutenant governor in place of Thomas P. Donovan, reported slated for a post with the federal court of claims.

Mrs. Mary Harwood of Washington ave. is visiting in Canton with her sister, Mrs. Charles Dickerhof. She will be gone a week or 10 days.

Miss Sara Pollock of East Liverpool spent the weekend with J. A. Pidgeon and family of South Lincoln ave.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Erin Parham and Mr. and Mrs. Earl R. Backus and son, Read of Youngstown were guests yesterday of relatives here.

Today's Pattern

SLIMNESS WITH JIFFY WRAP-AROUND
Pattern 2648

Take one look at this smart wrap-around frock and, if you're at all inclined to overweight, you'll know it's just the one for you, and just simple enough for you to cut and stitch in a morning. A surprise style, it's able to give the more matronly figure the same slender lines that she enjoys in her better frocks, for the double wrap in front gives diaphragm and abdomen a really firm support, and the waistline a neatly shaped outline. Too, no slip is necessary with the generous shadow-proof over-lap. Choose a pretty polka dot, percale, a bright singham, or a white, crisply starched poplin if you'd look charming at your work.

Pattern 2648 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 4 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. Be sure to state size.

Be sure to order our spring pattern book for smart new clothes that'll fit you and your needs to a T. Gay, practical frocks to cheer you at work. Lovely party frocks and sports clothes to flatter you at play. Collars, blouses, skirts for multiplying costumes. Chic slenderizing styles. Patterns for tots. Fabric and accessory news. Price of book, 15 cents. Book and pattern together, 25 cents.

Britain's Famous Bard Suddenly Ill

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Rudyard Kipling, Britain's famous bard of adventure in India, became seriously ill suddenly today and underwent an emergency operation in a London hospital for a gastric disorder.

The poet, who observed his 70th birthday anniversary just two weeks ago, was stricken in a suite of Brown's hotel. He was taken in an ambulance to the Central Middlesex hospital this morning.

The first hospital announcement said "an urgent operation was performed." The noon bulletin said the patient was "doing as well as could be expected."

The operation, requiring almost two hours, was performed by Dr. Alfred E. Webb-Johnson, honorary surgeon of the Middlesex hospital.

Mrs. Kipling accompanied her husband to the hospital.

Glorifying the Black Frocks

Accessories Put Life Into Dull Fabrics, As Shown By These Models

By MARIE MAROT

A BOON to the busy woman or the budgeteer is the basic black frock of excellent fabric and cut, but without any trimming, so designed as to be worn with various accessories. If your Christmas packages contained bits of costume jewelry, lace or lingerie collar and cuff sets, fancy belts or velvet ascot scarves, then the thing to do is to provide yourself with a basic black frock, the type that is being featured by stores all over the country. Then you'll not only look nice, but you'll have fun experimenting with the various accessories so as to appear apparently in a different dress each time. Here we see a basic black frock glorified and made spring-like by the addition of a tunic or waistcoat of white pique. Or in place of the pique, a lame gilet or a three-strand necklace of pearl beads would look equally smart. The other frock, just waiting for smart accessories, is of black crepe with a tricky scarf attached to the sleeve edges in a flange and made to be worn various ways.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

By Wanda Barton

The tendency today is toward smaller houses, with rooms compact and highly efficient. Apartment dwelling is gaining ground even in country towns where there is plenty of space for building.

Life in general is being reduced to essentials, stripped of as much elaboration and ornamentation as possible. So it isn't astonishing to find this trend reflected in the new houses. But to those of us who found happiness in a more spacious age, this state of affairs isn't the happiest thing in the world.

So, while we admire the novel arrangements for making the most of the restricted space at hand, while we are grateful for all the electric aids, devices and gadgets, inadequate to our possessions, we can't be reconciled to things as they are because there isn't enough storage space.

Closest Space at Premium
The spacious closets of the advertisements usually resolve themselves into large boxes that seem entirely inadequate to our possessions, no matter how limited these may be. Often just a few shelves must suffice for the household linen, for household tools and equipment. So with closet space at a premium, the only thing to do is to make use of every bit of possible space, including the closet doors in particular.

Closet door frames today are as clever as they can be. Many department stores stock them but it is often best to devise and build a frame that will take care of individual needs. A handy man can easily build such a frame and as the cost of materials is small, the whole improvement will entail a minimum of expense and bother.

Quarter-inch plywood is good and it is cheap, as is glue, paint and trim. The light wood is essential for the frame must be kept at a minimum, otherwise the door may be pulled out of alignment. Of course, if the frame is to be used on a stout, well-seasoned door, then the risk will be much less.

A small, badly planned linen closet was rendered entirely adequate by building onto the door a shallow frame, containing shelves large enough to hold small pieces such as guest towels, doilies, cocktail napkins, and such, leaving the closet itself free for the larger pieces. Shelves were nicely finished with pleated edging in deep lavender satin banded with orchid ribbon, and thus a small, unattractive closet was turned into a storage space as ornamental as it was useful.

A bedroom containing two small closets had to serve as a wardrobe room as well. So each closet door was carefully fitted with a frame containing three shelves, four small compartments and racks for shoes. The compartments, small as they were, took care of stockings or socks. Hats, boxes for gloves, scarves and undies found a home on the shelves. Thus it was found possible to rip out all the shelves in the closets and devote the entire space to the placing of frocks, wraps and coats.

Modernistic motif in swimming modes was stressed at New York charity fashion show in this delightful bathing suit worn by Margaret Minnigerode, society mannequin.

BRUNO'S STAFF IN FINAL FIGHT

Two Washington Attorneys Added to Hauptmann Defense

Jersey law for a 90-day reprieve. Would Not Challenge Reprieve.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz, who directed the prosecution of Hauptmann, indicated today that if the governor should grant a reprieve he would not challenge its legality.

No word has been received from Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of the ransom negotiation, who sailed Friday night on a southern cruise. He will land at Cristobal, C. Z., on the day set for Hauptmann's execution.

Governor Hoffman declared that in saying Saturday he believed Dr. Condon "should have been taken into custody for questioning," he was merely expressing an opinion. "I deny that I ordered any official to request the arrest of Condon," he said.

The governor explained, however, that he believed the aged Bronx schoolmaster should have been questioned because of his statement that he had been offered $250,000 to change his testimony and because of his letter to the New York Times indicating that more than one person was guilty. "In that letter," the governor said, "Condon mentioned the cabinet maker who cut the wood for the ladder, the carpenter who nailed that ladder together, and also mentioned the cowardly knave who climbed the ladder."

Claimed Different Evidence
"In magazine articles, he claimed he found evidence that the child was murdered in his crib, and not out of the crib. He said further that the letter was found in the crib not on the sill."

"This is doubly important because this story is at variance with Colonel Lindbergh's statements and testimony."

"There is a great discrepancy between Condon's original remarks to police officers and on the witness stand."

At the state prison Col. Mark O. Kimberling, warden, went forward with arrangements for the execution. Hauptmann, he said, remains his characteristic calm.

Tears came to Hauptmann's eyes when his lawyer broke to him the news that the pardon board had refused clemency, but his only comment was:

"I have told the truth. I can tell no other story."

There was some opinion that the opening of the legislature tomorrow might be accompanied by an airing of the case.

A statement by former State Senator Emerson Richards charged that Governor Hoffman saw in the case a chance to bolster his chances for the Republican presidential or vice presidential nomination.

Townsend Forces Feel Optimistic

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Chances of passing the Townsend pension plan at this session of congress looked brighter to the field general of the Townsend forces today as a result of house approval of the soldiers' bonus.

Asserting the bonus vote was "an admission by the powers that be of the soundness of the Townsend plan," Robert E. Clements, secretary and directing head of the pension movement, predicted addition of at least 100 representatives to the Townsend bloc in the house. "The big argument for immediate payment of the bonus was the effect the money would have in increasing purchasing power," Clements declared. "That is precisely the argument for the Townsend plan."

If it would aid business to increase the circulation of money once, with the bonus, it should be much better to do it over and over again each month with pensions for our old people."

The Townsanders advocate a two per cent transactions tax to raise $200 a month pension for every person over 60 years.

Olson In Contest As Foe of Court

(By Associated Press)
ROCHESTER, Minn., Jan. 13.—Floyd B. Olson, Minnesota's Farmer-Labor governor, definitely in the race for nomination as United States senator today on a campaign platform of "check the supreme court."

Recovering at the Mayo Brothers clinic from a stomach operation Governor Olson said last night he would seek election to the post of the late Thomas D. Schall, Republican, who was killed in an automobile accident in Washington last month.

The governor recently appointed Elmer A. Benson, Farmer-Laborite, to complete Schall's term which expires next January.

In announcing his candidacy, Governor Olson challenged both Republicans and Democrats to show what he termed courage and seek themselves to curtail the power of the supreme court.

Governor Olson said he was willing to campaign on that single issue, particularly in view of the recent AAA verdict, and possibly refuse his support for President Roosevelt's re-election.

OHIO ASSEMBLY MARKING TIME

Look Ahead to June and See New Relief Problems

further developments of the program.

In Ohio's legislature some members already have cast an approving eye toward the date. The state's majority floor leader, Paul Yoder of Eaton, has started to move toward enactment of a new ice tax, a levy on such activities as laundering.

Would Produce 8 Million

He estimates this tax, a comparison to the three per cent retail sales levy, would produce $8,000,000 in relief from the crucial date to the turn of the year.

Yet, a proposal for such a levy was discussed and discarded during the bitter struggle over reenactment of the sales tax last month. Governor Dwyer is unalterably opposed to new taxes and has said he will count this opposition to his credit when he bids for votes for reelection.

Further, he is opposed, though not unalterably, to the state assuming too great a share of the relief burden. He believes the counties should carry the bulk.

These thoughts in the minds of legislators, plus the immediate necessity of disposing of the later senate-revised biennial appropriations bills, a senate-passed bill to appropriate $9,000,000 for old age pensions for six months, house-passed milk control and persons income tax bills, and an unemployment insurance bill which is part of the administration favored social security act conformity program, foreshadow restless days.

"WIFE IN CUSTODY" by BEATRICE LUBITZ

Dirk found Helen browned by the hot tropical sun and looking more beautiful than he had ever seen her. He told her so. She pressed his hand gratefully.

"Dirk, it was good of you to come. I never dreamed you would. Oh, you are so good!"

"Listen, young woman, I'm not going to sit by and see you wreck your life, get me? You love Walter, don't you?"

"Yes, yes."

"Then we've got to put our heads together. Now first let me get into a cool suit. Then a long cool drink and then we'll talk."

Two hours later they sat in the green-and-white sitting room. Dirk, in a white linen suit, looked cool and comfortable.

"All right, Helen, shoot," he said gravely. "Tell me everything. I promise you I won't interrupt. I know pretty much what you're up against but there must be another way besides leaving Walter. It's cruel to you both. You love him, and he loves you. I can't help thinking it's like amputating the hand because the finger is festering. All right, now, tell me. I'll keep my opinions to myself until you've finished."

He opened his cigarette case and carefully chose one. Under cover of lighting it, he studied her carefully. "Come, we'll walk on the boardwalk in the sun. The sun makes everything so much brighter."

Helen laughed. "Wait, I'll get a hat."

They walked slowly arm in arm along the boardwalk, engrossed in conversation. As they talked Dirk was conscious of her beauty; how she blended into the richly colored tropical scene; the emerald-green sea, the dazzling sand, Helen's ash-blond hair, her warm skin, her slim, supple form—they were all indelibly stamped on his memory. He would always associate her and this lovely scene. He brought himself to the problem at hand with an effort. He wanted to help her. He had come down to help her.

"Helen, family interference has shattered more marriages than immorality and infidelity and drink put together. Sometimes even well-meaning relatives can poison the lives of two persons. He drew a deep breath, wondering if he sounded as pedantic to her as he did to himself, but he went firmly on. "Walter isn't entirely to blame."

"No?" she asked huskily. "Hasn't he listened and abetted and been influenced by them? If he truly loved me, he wouldn't even let them discuss me."

"Theoretically you're right, but actually families seem to think they have a divine right. It's perfectly easy to shut up well-meaning friends but not so easy to shut up a mother or sister. Walter is a peculiar fellow, absolutely the victim of circumstances. He has an idea his sisters have made him."

They swung along together in step. Dirk clenched her arm but went on calmly.

"You see, my dear, the war and the unusual prosperity of the last six years since the war have put into the hands of people without cultural background a lot of money and power which they never had before in their whole history and which they know neither how to use nor how to enjoy. Not one of them knows how to adjust himself to life, not even Walter. There are thousands of such people. Lists of millionaires contain hundreds of new names, men who amassed fortunes during the war. They are quite dreadful. They are building magnificent palaces in the worst possible taste along the ocean front here and everywhere else, filling them with things and more things. Things dominate their lives, fill their minds, become their deity and the result—a restless, dissatisfied people without tradition, without understanding and without charm." He laughed. "But we're roaming far afield from your problem."

"My little problem seems curiously unimportant when placed against that broader horizon," said Helen.

Dirk grinned. "That's fine. That, I believe, is called perspective. But to come back. At least give Walter a chance. You can't just walk out on him like this. It isn't sportsmanlike and will only bring unhappiness to you both. You've been here nearly a week. Your brow must certainly have been cooled a little! Wire for him. Get him here. Get him away from those women! Walk with him along this lovely waterfront and put the facts up to him clearly and without heat. Remember what we said about poison? Don't weaken, don't compromise. God and right are on your side. Give him an ultimatum if necessary. You know, either—or! Walter has a lot of his mother's good horse sense and he loves you. I think you'll both be happier for it and if you can save your marriage, isn't it worth it?"

Her eyes were shining. "Oh, Dirk, you're so wonderful. You make everything so clear, so limpidly clear, so simple. I'll wire him tomorrow so that he can be here over the weekend. I'll do everything you say. I'll ask him to choose once and for all whether it's I or the Rileys. Oh, Dirk, I love him so. I can give him so much," she whispered. "He can make me so happy, too. I want him so!"

Dirk's eyes clouded but he smiled. "Good girl, Helen!"

She stopped impulsively to face him. "And you, Dirk? What about you? Are you happy?"

He smiled at her tenderly. "I'm a man, Nellie. It's easier for men than for women to adjust themselves. I'm all right. Don't worry about me. I have an extremely elastic backbone. I bend easily but I don't break. I'm all right."

"I'm so glad, Dirk. But is it enough?"

"I just got to make the best of it. I loath divorce; besides, I have no real grounds. There's the boy now and I have many things to interest me."

She pressed his arm and they walked for a while in silence, each thinking his own thoughts. A steady stream of gaily dressed, laughing people flowed along the boardwalk going in the opposite direction. Suddenly two persons detached themselves from the crowd and stood staring at them. Helen looked up suddenly to meet two hostile pairs of eyes, but since she didn't know them, she continued her walk which fitted so rhythmically with Dirk's.

"Did you see that couple, Dirk? The way they stared at us?"

"Yes, do you know them?"

"I never laid eyes on them before."

"Maybe they were bowled over with your beauty," grinned Dirk.

Helen laughed. "Oh, Dirk. Look, there's Fredericks and baby. Oh, yoo-hoo!" Helen called gaily. "Come on, Dirk, we can crawl over this rail. Gracie's going to get a bath. Let's watch. Oh, how darling she looks! Gracie, Gracie!"

Later at dinner Helen said: "Shall I tell Walter you were here?"

"If you like. But don't you think he'd be better pleased if he thought the conciliation move came from you alone?"

"Yes, I suppose he would."

"Then use your judgment, Nell. Either way is all right."

"Did you tell Irene you were coming down to talk to me?"

"No. I just said I was called south. Irene and I don't tell each other much these days."

"Do you think she'd mind?"

"I doubt it. Irene has superb self-confidence. Jealousy, like simplicity, plays no part in her makeup."

"I shouldn't want you to go into any difficulties over me."

He laughed heartily. "Why, you old-fashioned little Puritan. What possible difficulties could there be? We aren't even stopping at the same hotel and we've spent this whole day in Florida's much advertised great outdoors. I shall leave early in the morning. As a matter of fact, you can get your telegram at 10 o'clock tonight. That will date our strictly moral day together so that even the most putrid-minded will be convinced."

Helen sent Walter a night letter at the apartment and at the moment he read it, Dirk was boarding the train New York bound. Helen in a white flannel suit and low white shoes saw him off. She waved her white felt hat until the train was out of sight. His last glimpse of her was her smiling tanned face, with its halo of ash-blond hair that caught the sun and reflected the sunlight. She was so slim, so young, so hopeful as she danced up and down. He felt his heart contract at her loveliness.

He drew a deep sigh. "What a waste," he thought sadly. "What a waste of love and loveliness. . . and yet she loves him!"

Walter opened Helen's telegram with his butter knife. Mamie in the kitchen was suddenly surprised to hear him laugh loudly and gaily.

"Mamie, Ma-mis," he called. "Pack my bag, quick. Throw in some shirts and stuff. Did my summer suit come back from the tailor's? Swell! Fire it in. And socks and white shoes. And my bathing suit and my tennis racket. Mrs. Riley's too. She forgot her. . . I know . . . better use the double bag. I'll do some phoning. Never mind breakfast! The deuce with breakfast. I'm going south!"

She met his train. He saw her on the platform. He wanted to leap off but the porter stood in front of him and blocked his way with a stool. She was in white and she looked cool and slim and curiously virginal.

He was going to clasp her in his arms, smother her with kisses. Nothing would ever separate them again!

He found himself shaking hands with her shyly. "Hello, my darling!"

"Hello, Walter. I'm so glad you could come."

"I took the first train out. Boy, did I rush! I brought you your tennis racket and your beach robe. You forgot them."

"I bought others. But thanks a lot just the same."

"I never laid eyes on them before."

"Maybe they were bowled over with your beauty," grinned Dirk.

Helen laughed. "Oh, Dirk. Look, there's Fredericks and baby. Oh, yoo-hoo!" Helen called gaily. "Come on, Dirk, we can crawl over this rail. Gracie's going to get a bath. Let's watch. Oh, how darling she looks! Gracie, Gracie!"

Theater Attractions

Paul Lukas and Kay Francis, who appear in "I Found Stella Parish," showing at the State theater Tuesday and Wednesday.

Kay Francis portrays an actress with a shady past in "I Found Stella Parish," showing on a double bill at the State theater Tuesday and Wednesday. Paul Lukas and Ian Hunter are the men in the Lukas, but she can not fall in love with any of them. When her husband, from whom she is separated, hears of her success, he attempts to blackmail her, using an event in her past which she has tried to bury and to keep from the ears of her child. Fearing that he will betray her secret and ruin her life and that of her child, she leaves London the night she makes her greatest hit on the stage.

Follows Actress
Ian Hunter, portraying a young journalist, becomes interested in the strange disappearance. He discovers that she is sailing for America so he follows her in order to obtain the story he wants. Through the child he becomes acquainted with the woman, gains her confidence, and obtains the information for the scoop.

Stunned and humiliated by the scandal made public gossip by the newspaper man whom she trusted, Miss Francis, as the actress, allows herself to be dragged lower and lower in her profession. Again she is sought, this time by Hunter, who now realizes his love for her.

Sybil Jason, the six-year-old child star, came to Hollywood from Cape-town, South Africa. She made her debut as the star of "Little Big Shot," seen at the State here about a month ago. In this film she proved her acting talent and her ability to sing and dance.

Horton in Star Role
The second film, "Your Uncle Dudley," is a comedy with Edward Everett Horton its star. In the first part of the picture Horton is a spineless man, about to lose his job and his business. He has a yen for civic affairs, loving cups and after dinner speeches. Then he takes stock of himself and decides to change his course. With this new personality he has developed, many things happen to Horton. Lois Wilson, the girl and others in the cast are Rosina Lawrence, John McGuire, Alan Dinehart and Marjorie Gate-son.

Tonight, at the State, Joe Penner's film, "Collegiate," is featured. It is the last showing. Jack Oakie, Frances Langford, Ned Sparks, Betty Grable complete the supporting cast.

The Grand tonight only presents "Cappy Ricks Returns" and the comedy, "Streamline Express" on a double bill.
